We were also reminded that the scope of taking action to counter the ongoing process of deterioration will be much shorter than a century. After that time, the planet will enter the red zone, where the ongoing process of worsening will become irreversible. All actions to reverse the process will have no impact whatsoever. Within the little time we have, only extraordinary, bold actions initiated immediately can save humans and other life forms from this massive disaster. The impact of these actions can push forward the red zone and give us time to reorganise the world for our dignified survival.

The conversation at Social Business Day will inspire bold actions and urge global leaders to take tough decisions on fossil fuel and plastic alternatives, peace and war, restoration of forests, saving ocean floors, and creating a new civilisation driven by human values of sharing and caring. The conference will be an exciting event to help rediscover ourselves and our journeys to create a world of three zeros: zero net carbon emissions, zero wealth concentration for ending poverty, and zero unemployment by unleashing entrepreneurship in all. Stories of social businesses leading with compassionate, practical, and long-lasting solutions will provide a new framework to eradicate destruction caused by war, global warming, and the pandemic by finding a creative solution to restore economic growth through social business.

The Social Business Day 2023 also featured keynotes, plenary sessions, workshops, and country forums to help us plan and chart our future actions towards creating a new civilisation in a world of three zeros.
